you're changing

CHILDREN

in need

“My son’s behavior in school started affecting his learning and his time in the classroom. He would throw chairs around or throw things at teachers and the principal. After getting multiple calls from the school, his counselor gave me information for Avera Family Wellness Program, where we got him scheduled for counseling. Since we started, he has developed the skills he needs to talk about his feelings and emotions, which has given him the opportunity to be back in the classroom. Now he can learn what he needs to learn, express what he’s feeling and understand some of his triggers. We now have the support system we need,” said an Avera Family Wellness Program participant.

VULNERABLE

adults

“The first time I went to FRIENDSLink, I saw a few people I knew from Augustana and a bunch of people that I didn’t know. The people there made me feel welcome. It was easy to talk to the people there. Sometimes we do a craft or play a game or go somewhere fun. Before FRIENDSLink, I didn’t have as many activities to do, so it wasn’t as fun. But then doing it afterwards, it was much better, and it was awesome to join and meet new friends as well,” said a FRIENDSLink participant.

PEOPLE

in crisis

“I was very deep into my addiction, which started off with a lot of underage consumption and just escalated from there. When my dad finally dropped me off at the St. Francis House, I was heartbroken. But then I started to realize that in order to be a good mom to my children, I needed to start taking responsibility. I needed to learn how to pay bills, provide food, stay sober and most of all, how to ask for help. The people at the St. Francis House believed in me and started showing me I was worth something, that I was worth respect,” said a St. Francis House participant.
